What I think it means to be confident is to have trust and self-assurance that you can do anything you believe you want to do. When I started a new school a few years ago, I felt like I couldn't make any friends or have a say in anything but after a few days I felt very confident in myself to raise my hand if I had an answer to a problem or if I needed help. Now I am in 6th grade and love my school and have a bunch of friends because I was confident with myself that I would shine bright like a diamond.

I am also a cadette with Troop 50. One time we took a trip to the farm and we had to go horseback riding. I was scared to do it because I had never done it. My friends were scared too but I decided to get on the horse and try it because I love horses. When I first got on the horse I felt like I was going to fall. But the owner told me it would be OK. I took a deep breath and listened to what I had to do. Then I realized the horse was doing what I was asking him to do. It was a great feeling to ride a horse and now I know how to do it because I am confident!
